DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 7-10 and rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Sato (US005931699A ).

In regard to claim 7, Saito's device discloses Saito's device discloses an electrical connector comprising a first connector and second connectors (C, B), a receiving slots (4, 7, 20), a flange (18, 15) with end face and side surface; the flange protruding at the end of the second connector at regionally engaging the receiving slot when the first and second connectors are coupled; a seal (5, 9) attached to the first connector; the seal being elastically deformed the flange when the first and second connectors are coupled; elements (8,10,11) formed of hard rubber act as pressing elements pressing radially the side surface of the flange when the first and second connectors are coupled; the pressing element projecting transversely to the plug direction into the receiving slot; at least one second pressing element (10) receiving at the end of the flange under axially direct tension forms one with the contact carrier as part of the housing, the pressing elements (8,10,11) being situated in the slot.

Art Unit: 2839

In regard to claims 8-10 and 12, Saito's device discloses the aforementioned limitations including the pressing element forms one piece with the contact carrier as part of the housing of the first connector (see fig. 2) composed of plastic material extending around the contact carrier with individual pressing region (see fig. 2) and having the circumferential ring shape.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 11 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over by Sato (US005931699A ).

Saito's device discloses the aforementioned limitations but fails to explicitly disclose the value of the Shore hardness of the elastic material. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have the plastic material with the Shore hardness of least 60, since it held that discovering an optimum value of a result effective variable involves only routine skill in the art. In re Boesch, 617 F. 2d 272, 205 USPQ 215 (CCPA 1980). It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use the plastic material with the Shore harness of least 60 to Saito's device to meet system design and requirement.
